INTERESTING.

Some further particulars of Colonel Burr's treason.

Various insinuations have appeared concerning the movements of Col. Burr. We have heard a statement from Gen. Eaton, now in town, which he gave in a considerable circle, with no injunctions of secrecy, as follows:

That early last winter at the city of Washington, Colonel Burr opened to him a project of revolutionizing the western country; separating it from the union; establishing a monarchy there, of which he was to be the head; organizing a force on the Mississippi, and extending conquest to Mexico; and proposed to give him (Eaton) a distinguished military command. E. felt indignant at the proposition, considering it an insult to his honor; but thought better to conceal his feelings than to manifest his resentment; and he suffered Burr to betray his whole scheme. Burr had the preceding season made a tour through the western country; had procured accurate charts of every important position on the waters of the Mississippi, and of the country extending to Mexico; had formed an intercourse with sundry influential foreigners—the Spanish territory, and together with some persons of influence on the Ohio and Mississippi, had fixed on a plan of operations. Burr painted to E. the injury he had suffered from certain observations which had been made on the floor of the house of representatives, concerning his operations in Africa, and from the delays of government in adjusting his claims for expenditures on the coast. Here was an opportunity to indemnify himself. A separation of the union would eventually take place—and that country become independent of the Atlantic states. It was a right they inherited from constitution—and nature had situated them peculiarly for the enjoyment of it. The present moment favored the measure. There was no energy in the government to be dreaded—and the divisions of political opinions throughout the country was a circumstance of which he should profit. There were very many enterprising men among us, who aspired to something beyond the dull pursuits of civil life, and who would volunteer in this project. And the vast territory which offered to adventurers, and the mines of Mexico would bring strength to his standard from all quarters. He did not doubt but that inducements might be offered to the army to embark with him. Double pay and double rations—a prospect of plunder and the ambition of achievement would do much with garrison soldiers. E. satisfied himself that Burr was resolute in the project, and put himself on expedient to defeat his views without exposing facts. He accordingly waited on the president, and used the freedom to mention Mr. Burr as a suitable person to conduct our negotiations at London or Madrid. The president seemed to express an apprehension that the confidence was too high. E. thought that Burr, when put on his honor, would act with fidelity; his capacity was unquestionable; and signified that if he remained in this country he would become dangerous. The president did not understand this insinuation. E. expressed himself plainly that if B. were not disposed of, we should, within eighteen months have an insurrection if not a revolution on the waters of the Mississippi. The president said "he had too much confidence in the information, integrity and attachment to the union of the people of that country, to admit an apprehension of the kind." No further conversation was had here on the subject. But E. took leave, waited on two or three gentlemen of congress, and detailed the whole plan of Burr. They all agreed that the fellow deserved hanging; but thought the project too chimerical, and Burr's circumstances too desperate to give it the merit of serious consideration. E. said not heard no more of the affair till he was accidentally informed of Burr's movements on the Ohio, when he spoke publicly of the facts.

Within a few weeks a letter was received by a young gentleman in Brimfield from his friend in Marietta, stating, that Colonel Burr had, by his agents, contracted for the building at that place of 15 or 20 boats constructed for the navigation of those waters; and that he had offered commissions to sundry enterprising young men of that vicinity, for a secret expedition, which promised great advantages to that country. As the foregoing statement was examined by Gen. Eaton before it went to press, the public will now be relieved from their suspense on this subject.

A friend of Gen. Eaton, on hearing this detail, asked him how Burr (in case he should extricate himself) would receive the exposure of these facts? He answered "As he pleases. I never solicited Burr's friendship nor his confidence. He ought to have known me better than to suppose me ever sufficiently abject to become the instrument of his ambition. And he ought to have known himself better, than to flatter himself possessed of capacities to seduce me to an act of treason."

From the Philadelphia Gazette,

RICHES OF LOUISIANA.

The following interesting detail of the soil and productive wealth of a portion of the lately acquired territory of the United States, is copied from a N. Orleans Gazette. It has since been transplanted into the National Intelligencer, introduced by the remark that though it is evidently the production of "a partial pen" its general contents are supposed to be correct. Having the honor of being acquainted with the intelligent writer of these statements, we feel a perfect freedom in vouching for their accuracy. It would give us pleasure if in recording the unparalleled fertility and productiveness of this boasted accession we could also add, that the administration of the general government, in providing for its organization, had manifested a suitable degree of foresight, prudence or discrimination.]

THE importance of Louisiana and the rank which nature destines it to hold, as a member of the United States are now becoming generally known to the people of the Union. Until lately, and whilst under the government of Spain, the province and its productions were regarded except by some merchants and adventurers; it was unexplored by those capable of appreciating its value, and the voice of the few who proclaimed its advantages and resources was either slighted or imputed to interested motives.

The veil is now rent, curiosity, speculation, and the wish for providing for poor and numerous families, have drawn amongst us, emigrants of all ranks from every part of the United States. The immensity of the country the richness of the soil, the value of the productions, the cheapness of land, the facility of intercourse between the most distant parts and the capital, the uncommon salubrity of the climate which was found equal to any part of the United States, have alike called forth their joy & astonishment, and the communications of their friends in the most distant recesses of the union, have at length dispelled the cloud of prejudice, which prevented the people of the Atlantic and Western states from examining and enjoying the benefits to be realized among us. Should the man of commerce entertain a doubt of the future grandeur of Louisiana, let him cast an eye on the map of America & with the first glance he must discover, that from the sources of the Ohio to the east, to those of the Missouri on the west, comprehending a space of forty degrees of longitude, and from the source of the Mississippi in the latitude of 47, to the Gulf of Mexico in the latitude of 29, every stream is tributary to, and pours with its waters, its productions, into the first of rivers; let him then inform himself of the present prodigious population of these countries until lately uninhabited. Let him enquire what they produced twenty years since, what they now produce, and from thence infer not only what they are capable of becoming but what they must be in an equal time in future when enjoying the blessings of a free government. Can any one reflect for an instant on this subject and not be lost in wonder.

Should the farmer for a moment doubt of realizing not only a competence, but a fortune for himself and family by his industry, let him enquire of his friends who have visited Louisiana, what those who have already emigrated there have acquired by their labor. He will learn that all those who were sober and industrious, though poor and unprotected on their arrival, are now rich and affluent, that the first rate land on navigable streams may be had at the fourth of the price of what he can sell his poor worn out fields for in the place he inhabits, that the produce of these lands is three or four times greater, and more costly than what he raises, and that the conveyance of these rich productions to market is in an inverse ratio to their value—that while at home the carriage of his crop to market consumes a great proportion of his time and of the value of the crop itself; yet in Louisiana it is comparatively nothing on account of the superior value of the object, and superior facility of a water communication. The farmer then will learn with surprise that he has overlooked or has been ignorant of these advantages, he will learn with pleasure, that many worthy characters among his countrymen have preceded him, and that on the Mississippi in particular, those who have attempted the cultivation of the Sugar Cane are making immense fortunes, with the same number of hands which in Maryland and Virginia scarce sufficed to pay their annual expenses. But it is not to the rich alone, who on account of the expense of the first establishments can attempt the cultivation of the Sugar Cane, that Louisiana holds out a prospect of better fortune—the poorer classes equally find their account in the cultivation of Indigo, Rice, and Cotton, which within a very few years have increased the riches of the inhabitants of the Mississippi territory and Louisiana generally, in a proportion that would not be believed, except by those who have seen the change. Louisiana then wants nothing but an additional population, to be the first country in the universe, and that population it is rapidly acquiring. It has the singular felicity of offering some advantages to each of the three great portions into which nature has divided our immense empire. To the inhabitants of the eastern states, who are mostly a commercial and seafaring people it offers an immense commerce which it can never carry on itself, for want of shipping and seamen of its own, as for ages to come the natives of the country will of choice apply to agriculture, which so soon affords them an independence, rather than to sea which has nothing in their eyes to compensate its toils & dangers. The people of the eastern states will therefore of necessity be carriers of our immense and wealthy productions to their own and foreign countries; they will supply us in return with the luxuries and conveniences of life, which we do not raise within ourselves they will form the richest commercial establishments among us, and by having connexions already formed in other countries, and large for ones already employed, will be able almost exclusively to enjoy a commerce which in a few years will be equal to that of the remainder of the U. States.

[a] Of 40,000 tons of shipping which now frequent the port of New Orleans, and are necessary to convey the present productions of Louisiana, to foreign markets, about 27,000 tons belong to the eastern or New England States, from which a judgment may be formed, of the interest they ought to take, in the affairs and prosperity of Louisiana. The imports and exports of this country united, amount to near six millions of dollars, and a very large proportion of his trade, has already fallen into the hands of the New England merchants.

FROM THE BALANCE.

THE LINGER.

"Visit your aunt, but not every day in the year." SPANISH PROVERB.

"It is not the quarter of a dollar, that I so much mind," said Scruple, "as the manner in which it is solicited. I have no posture." This observation was caused by the application of a miserable looking object for charity. His mode of asking alms was indeed singular. He presented a printed hand-bill, under the signature of "Humamitus," representing himself to be a poor orphan, grievously afflicted with innumerable fever-sores, &c. and advertising a book which he had for sale. He soon after called with his book, with an expectation of receiving twenty-five cents, not as a gift, but as the price of a paltry fiction, which was dignified with the title of a history. I confess I was not much surprised at Scruple's remark. I was too much disgusted myself to blame him. You know, Mr. Editor (for you are undoubtedly acquainted with the trade) that there is some profit in printing books, provided they will sell. Some petty chap-man had, in all probability, taken this method to dispose of his work.

"Well, the fellow has got his two shillings, and let him go," said Pungent, "He only carries on, in a small way, a species of begging, in which others deal more largely." Every eye was turned on Pungent. "It is the first instance of the kind I have ever known," said Scruple. "Oh," replied Pungent, "it is practised daily. It is not a week since a beggar of the same description called on me, not for two shillings, but for two dollars."

"What was the matter with him?" asked Scruple.

"I don't know, I suppose he was needy." "Was he an orphan?" "I believe not." "Had he fever-sores?" "No; he had an itch."

"What?" exclaimed Scruple, interrupting him, "had he got the itch?"

"An itch for notoriety, that's all," replied Pungent with an arch smile.

"And what did he offer you for your money?" said Scruple.

"He offered to send me a weekly print for a year."

"And is there anything amiss in a man's asking patronage for a paper?"

"By no means; I would only put those who set up such mendicant presses and beg for subscribers, on a footing with the poor object who just now offered you a consecrated catch penny pamphlet, and demanded a quarter of a dollar for it, by way of charity. Such speculations have become too common. I can see no reason why the public should be pestered with the importunities of these adventurers, who, under an imposing garb, palm their crude whims upon the world."

"I should suppose," answered Scruple, "it would be as well to expose their works and let those who like them purchase."

"That would answer every body's purpose but their own," replied Pungent with a broad laugh.

BY THIS DAY'S MAIL.

NEW YORK, December 1.

Important Foreign Intelligence.

The ship Ceres, Riker, in 48 days from Liverpool, arrived here yesterday, with London news to the 18th of October.

LONDON, Oct. 4.

The Gazette of this evening contains the following letters, transmitted by admiral Sir Charles Cotton, bart. to William Marsden, esq.

CANOPUS, AT SEA,

September 29, 1805.

SIR,

I have the honor to inform you with my falling in with the French frigate Le President of 44 guns, 330 men, commanded by Monsieur Gallier Labrosse, on the 17th inst. in lat. 47 degrees 17 minutes N. long 6 degrees 52 minutes W. and after a chase of seventeen hours, she struck to his majesty's squadron under my command.

The President is one of the frigates that sailed from France with the Regulus, Sybelles, and Surveillante corvettes: separated in a gale of wind on the 28th of August, in lat. 22 degrees 26 minutes N. and long. 55 degrees W.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed)

THO. LOUIS.

Sir Charles Cotton, bart. &c.

CENTAUR, AT SEA,

September 29, 1805.

SIR,

Yesterday morning, about one o'clock, I had the good fortune of falling in with a squadron of the enemy standing to the westward; the squadron under my orders being then on my larboard tack, stretching in for Chafferson light house, six or seven miles from us, the Revenge to windward and the Monarch to the leeward, on the look out, the latter ship first making a signal for an enemy, when I soon discovered seven sail to leeward of me; and considering them, in part, line of battle ships, the signal was made to form the line and shortly after I observed them bearing up, making all sail, and running to the ss. The signal was instantly made for a general chase, and the Monarch, from her position and good sailing, was enabled to keep nearly within gun shot, a mile and a half, of little more, ahead of the Centaur, and the Mars on the starboard bow. At day light we made them out five large frigates and two corvettes, one of which bearing a broad pendant; at five the Monarch fired a few chase shot; and at six the weathermost frigate hauled more to the westward, in pursuit of which I dispatched the Mars; and one frigate, with the two corvettes, edged away to the south east, the remaining three frigates keeping in close order, indicating the intention of supporting each other. At a quarter past ten the Monarch opened her starboard guns on the enemy, when a heavy cannonading commenced, and by the enemy's management of a running fight, they succeeded, in some measure, in crippling the Monarch's sails and rigging before the Centaur could get up. At eleven we got within fair range of two, and opened our fire from the starboard guns, whilst the Monarch kept engaging the third ship, and about noon one of the two frigates struck as did the one opposed to the Monarch shortly after.

It was just before this I received a severe wound in the right arm (since amputated, and doing well I hope) which obliged me to leave the deck; the Mars previous to this had succeeded in capturing her chase, and with her prize, hauled towards the Centaur, in chase of and firing at the French commodore's ship, and at three assisted in capturing her. Those ships of the enemy made an obstinate resistance, but the result was, as may be well supposed, attended with much slaughter, being crowded with troops, out of Rochefort the evening before.

I cannot add too much praise to captain Lee of the Monarch, for his gallant and officer-like conduct, but I am sorry to find his loss has been rather severe, the swell of the sea preventing, at times, the opening of the lower deck ports.

To captain Lukin of the Mars, I feel thankful for his steady conduct and attention; and I have also to express my satisfaction at the endeavors of captains Boyle, King, sir John Gore and Maschfield in getting up with the enemy, altho' they could not succeed. The Revenge, from being well to windward, became considerably a target after bearing up.

Sol lieutenant Case, first of the Centaur, I have to add my approbation of his judicious conduct before and after my leaving the deck, and I also feel much pleasure at the steady exertions of all my officers, seamen and marines.

I enclose herewith a return of the killed and wounded, and I also annex a list of the enemy's ships captured, and will make a return of their loss as soon as possible.

I have the honor to be, &c.

SAM. HOOD.

POSTSCRIPT.

Since the above was prepared for press we have received a regular file of London papers to the 11th October.

These papers state, that

A Russian squadron, with 4000 troops, had arrived at Portsmouth.

Paris papers of the 7th October mention that Bonaparte was on his way from Mentz to Wurtzburg, where the French army was to have been united on the 4th.

Letters from different parts of the continent report that a second action had been fought on the 26th Aug. in Calabria, and that the British had defeated the French.

The Prussian head-quarters continued at Mannheim on the 27th September; but it was expected they would be advanced to Hoff, in the principality of Bayreuth, before the end of the month. The preparations of France are stated to be upon the most enormous scale; and that all the disposable force from Boulogne to the Inn, is brought to bear on the Saxon frontier. Austria, if not prepared for actual hostility, is, at least, taking every precaution to cause her territory to be respected. She has assembled a very large army in Bohemia, between Tabor and Prague. Bonaparte will therefore weaken his army, by sending part of it to watch the Austrians. If the French troops are confident of success, the Prussians are no less so; and at no period has the spirit of the people, and the army been more exalted than it is now. A large body of Austrian cavalry has established itself on the frontiers of Bohemia. The change of position by Soult's corps, from Passau and Ingolstadt, is, perhaps, to be attributed to this movement. It was expected that Bonaparte would commence hostilities on the 7th of October; that being the day that he attacked the Austrians the last year with so much success.

The Times of the tenth says, "The universal satisfaction which has appeared among all ranks of the people, on the official communication of lord Lauderdale's immediate return from Paris, is a proof of the general confidence in the resources of the country, as well as the wise and effectual administration of them. When the great commercial interest of the British empire, assembled at the Royal-Exchange of London to receive the notifications of continuing the war, it was received with reiterated acclamations of joy—when the great shipping interest collected at Lloyd's coffee house, gave the important intelligence the same congratulatory reception—when the same British spirit is displayed by every class of the people, it proves an union of sentiment which is, above all things, desirable at the present crisis, as well as that opinion of the wisdom, activity, and patriotism of ministers, which must at all times invigorate their zeal, and strengthen their measures for the public good."

On the 8th Omnium left off at 7—on the 9th, after the news of lord Lauderdale's return, it was done as high as six premium; it then declined to 3 & closed about 4.

Mr. Fox's body was interred on the 10th in Westminster abbey, adjoining the monument of lord Chatnam, within 18 inches of the grave of Mr. Pitt.

A physician had been sent over to France to accompany lord Lauderdale home, he being very ill.

Several expeditions were preparing to sail from England.

In consequence of the news of Miranda's having taken Coro, several vessels were preparing to sail from England for the Spanish Main, in expectation of Miranda's getting possession of that country.

It is said to be the intention of the emperor of France to proclaim Jerome Bonaparte king of the Jews.

Alexandria Daily Advertiser.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4.

Washington, Dec. 3d.

A message from the President this day announced to the House the happy progress our ministers are making in London towards an adjustment of our differences with G. Britain—Several causes he says, but particularly the death of Mr. Fox, have occasioned delays; but every thing is now "proceeding in a spirit of accommodation." "As a mark of our candid spirit," the President recommends the temporary suspension of the non importation act. The message was referred to a select committee, at the request of Mr. Randolph, who is probably chairman of the committee: I therefore expect a new edition of his last winter's thunder and lightning. This message was occasioned principally by dispatches received here last evening.

FACTS!

We have some advices of a date as late as the 27th of October, from the Mississippi. The officers of the government under the direction of the president of the United States, have been a considerable time engaged in investigations concerning the conspiracy of which Mr. Burr is the head, and in which several persons in that neighborhood are at least represented to be implicated.

We also learn, that the Spanish governor general of eastern New Mexico, don Saluda, had arrived at Nachitoches and declared the rupture of the convention between the Spanish governor Cardero, and declared his determination not to regard it, and to return to this side of the Sabine and occupy and maintain all the territory which the Spaniards claimed, even at the risk of all Mexico; and that there was an army of thirty thousand men, marching from Mexico to his support. The correspondent who communicates the above is of the most respectable character, and his veracity superior to doubt: he states however that there is more of gasconade than reality, in their threats; and that the menaced forces, tho' far short of the number stated, are more numerous than any force we possess south of the Chesapeake, and that a considerable force will be requisite in that quarter.

[Aurora.]

Yesterday the notorious foreigner Thomas H. Judges, alias Thomas Jourdan, counterfeiter of 50 and 100 dollar bills on the bank of Baltimore, and for whom the cashier of said bank offered a reward of 1500 dollars, was apprehended, and after being examined before squire Alsquith, was committed to prison. We learn that the plates and other apparatus for counterfeiting have been delivered to the proper authority.

(Balt. pap.)

An election held yesterday at Mr. Bryden's tavern, for fifteen directors to the Bank of Baltimore, the following gentlemen were elected for the ensuing year—viz.

George Salmon
William Wilson
William Lorman
William Mathews
Joseph Sterrett
Isaac M Kim
Thomas Tenant
Elias Elliott
John Stricker

*Joshua Bailey.

Those marked (*) are new members.

We have again the pleasure of placing before our readers the last intelligence from Europe. By the ship William Tell arrived at this port, Resolution at Boston, and the ship Ceres at New York, we have received files of London papers to the 11th of October, and Paris advices to the 7th.

[Phil. Register.]

The French troops were assembling from different points at Frankfort, where the head quarters of the grand army would be established.

The emperor Napoleon had left Mentz for Wurtzburg, whence he was to proceed to Frankfort.

The king of Holland had taken the field and was assembling an army, which, when completed would consist of 80,000 men.

The Prussian and French armies were approaching each other, and every circumstance announced the immediate commencement of hostilities.

A letter has been addressed by emperor Napoleon to the king of Bavaria, calling for his contingent of troops as a member of the confederation of the Rhine, and declaring that the French contingent would be increased from 2 to 300,000.

Two thirds of the Austrians, prisoners to France, had been restored, but a jealousy of the intention of Austria, in the approaching contest with Prussia, had decided the French government to leave a large force to watch the motions of the Austrians.

The conquest of Buenos Ayres is noticed in the Paris papers, as having been achieved by a force comparatively small with the population and resources of the country.

The English prints state, that the squadron, of which four frigates had been captured by sir S. Hood, had sailed from France with an intention to attempt the recovery of Buenos Ayres; but by this capture, the expedition was entirely defeated.

A letter from a gentleman in Liverpool to his friend in this city dated October 11, states that lord Lauderdale had returned from Paris; but this information cannot be correct. Our London papers are to the evening of the tenth, at which time he had not returned, but was expected to reach Deal or Dover on the twelfth or thirteenth.

Our Liverpool accounts are to the 13th of Oct. and our London papers of the 10th in the evening are the latest received on the continent.

The Tobaccoist of Gretna Green, according to the account given of him at Guildford Assizes, is a bon vivant of rare talents. It is said that he treats himself to a gallon of Hollands on every marriage, and during the summer season he warms two couples per day! He is near eighty years of age, and he has neither been sick nor sober for a single day these forty years.

(London pap.)

The finances of New York are in a more flourishing situation than in any of the preceding years. By official statements laid before the legislature it appears that her capital, principally consisting of U. S. and bank stock, amounts to 1,612,000 dollars; that her annual receipts independent of taxes amount to 198,000 dollars; that, on the first of November, 1806, there was a specie balance in the treasury of 83,000 dollars; and that the estimated receipts for the ensuing year, together with the specie balance in the treasury, will be 243,000 dollars, of which only 92,000 dollars are computed to be the annual demand—leaving a clear balance of 151,000 dollars.

VALUABLE LANDS,
To be Sold very Cheap.
I WISH to sell my Mill Tract of Land, situated on Back-Lick and Indian-Runs, about six miles from the town of Alexandria; containing about eleven hundred acres. On this tract are two plantations besides the mill farm—on the latter there is a very good mill, in which are one pair of burrs, and one pair of cullen stones, with elevators, &c. complete for merchant work—a distillery convenient to the mill, with four stills and every necessary utensil in complete order—a dwelling-house, kitchen, barn, with stables under it to accommodate 20 stalls, with every other out-house requisite on a farm—a very good garden, an orchard of about 2500 trees of the choicest fruits this country can afford. There is about 300 or 400 acres of the tract cleared, the remainder in woods and a great part of it heavily timbered; about 30 or 40 acres of meadow, and nearly 300 acres more may be made on the bottoms adjoining the two runs.

ALSO,

One other tract of one hundred acres, about two miles from Alexandria, part of the Cleish Tract, and adjoining the lands of Messieurs John C. Herbert, Robert Patton, and John Richter, the Mount-Vernon road running through it. This tract is mostly in woods, and conveniently situated for country seats. If these lands should be sold at private sale, (which I would prefer) I will take in payment, if more convenient to the purchasers, stock of any of the banks from Richmond to New-York, or any kind of stock of the United States.

If they are not sold before Friday the first day of May next, the Mill Tract will, on that day, be sold at public auction, to the highest bidder—and on the following day the Cleish Lands will be sold in like manner. The Mill Tract will be divided into three or four farms and sold subject to a lease of four and an half years from the first day of July last. The Cleish Tract will be divided into lots of 10 or 20 acres each. If sold at public auction the terms will be made known on the days of sale.

Richmond, 17th Oct.—22. (Nov. 4.) 2aw6w

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Mutual Assurance Society, against Fire on Buildings of the state of Virginia, held at the General Office, on the 30th of September, 1806, the following Resolution was adopted, which is by order of the Board published for the information of the persons concerned, viz:
A GREAT variety of causes having concurred to render it inconvenient and impracticable to complete the revaluation of those buildings in the towns and in the country, which had been insured prior to the 30th of January, 1805, at the period limited by the last resolution of the Board on that subject. Resolved, therefore, that the special agents of this Society be allowed till the first day of December next inclusive, to complete the revaluation of all buildings which have been insured as aforesaid, within the districts and towns for which they may have been severally appointed; and that no further indulgence hereafter, will be extended to those members of the Society, who shall fail to have their buildings revalued, on or before the said first day of December next.
